

I am accosted by marketers trying to sell me things everywhere: at the grocery store by cashiers and children collecting money at the door, at the mall by sales people, at work by account managers on cold calls, on the road by billboards...I want to at least be free from marketers in the privacy of my own home! I should not have to pay extra for caller ID to determine who is calling, and I should not have to allow the answering machine to pick up in order to screen my calls! My phone is for my convenience, and I would appreciate the FCC allowing New Jersey law to stand as is and protect my choice to not be harassed at home by telemarketers.
